

Our voices have been heard! Our job is not done...

In response to the overwhelming number of comments received, the ACGME has reversed their decision to eliminate the requirement for a board-certified Developmental-Behavioral Pediatric (DBP) faculty in Pediatric residency programs (while preserving the long-standing ability for programs to apply for a waiver allowing the DBP rotation to be taught by another qualified professional, whose credentials must be approved by the ACGME, if no Developmental-Behavioral Pediatricians are available).

Now our task is to seal the deal by leaving a comment on the ACGME website expressing support for the current proposal – which must be done by 8/23/23.

Please follow these simple instructions below and post your comments to support the new training proposal and to advocate for ongoing support of the DBP workforce.
